

Why?

Manning & Napier is committed to safeguarding your personal information. We hold ourselves to the highest standards of trust and fiduciary responsibility.

Financial companies choose how they share your personal information. Federal law gives consumers the right to limit some but not all sharing. Federal law also requires us to tell you how we collect, share, and protect your personal information. Please read this notice carefully to understand what we do.

What?

The types of personal information we collect and share depend on the product or service you have with us. This information can include:

Social Security Number	Income	Assets
Address	Occupation	Investment Objectives

When you are no longer our customer, we continue to share your information as described in this notice.

How?

All financial companies need to share customer's personal information to run their everyday business. Through the normal course of business and to better service your account, Manning & Napier may disclose your personal information to affiliates to enable it and its affiliates to process transactions you request. We may also disclose information about you and your account to third parties, as permitted by law, including to broker/dealers, custodians, issuers, or other companies used to provide services to you. Such third-party service providers are subject to the laws of the jurisdiction in which they reside, domestic or foreign, and may share information with their affiliates, subsidiaries and other third parties exclusively to provide the services for which they were retained or as otherwise permitted under applicable law. From time to time, we may be required to give information about our business to regulatory authorities. This may include your personal information.

We do not sell your personal information to anyone. In the section below, we list the reasons financial companies can share their customer's personal information; the reasons Manning & Napier chooses to share; and whether you can limit this sharing.
